CLEAN MILK DEMANDED

Health Commissioner Dixon Tells of Methods of Dealers and Employes in Handling Milk. Says Farmers Are Cleanly in Their Duties.

"Don't let's put too much blame on the farmers," said State Health Commissioner Dixon Saturday in discussing the question of pure milk supply, a problem that is troubling so many municipalities throughout Pennsylvania.

"As an old farmer myself who has led the reapers around the wheat field, swinging a cradle, and then in the evening milking my share of the cows, I am naturally favorable to the dairy farmer, but is the close study of actual conditions that convinces me that the first disease germs often perhaps most frequently, get into the milk after it has passed out of the farmer's control.

"The farmer appreciates more today the necessity of keeping milk clean. He knows that if it reaches the market sweet and pure the demand will be increased. He is constantly up against a difficult task to make money out of his dairy when he has to buy new cattle to take the place of those that have gone dry, become sick and died. He must produce or purchase food for them, keep up the stable, pay his help, constantly replenish his supply of pails, buckets, etc., and haul his milk over all kinds of roads, through all sorts of weather and then receive for all this four or four and a half cents a quart from the dealer.

"The milk often begins to receive pollution on the railroad, when an attendant takes off the lid of a milk can, helps himself to a drink and then replaces the lid, drippings of milk which have reached his lips going back into the can.

"Does this sound like an exaggeration? Let me cite a case. I remember a baggage-master who once called upon me for medical advice. I found him suffering with pulmonary tuberculosis. When I advised him to drink plenty of milk he informed me that he was drinking a great deal of it. He said he hauled milk in his car and that he was in the habit of drinking out of the lids of the cans.

"At the stations and along the streets the milk dealers often purchase from each other. The purchaser sticks his finger into the milk and then into his mouth to determine the sweetness and then into the second can until he tests as many cans of milk as he proposes purchasing.

"Only a few days ago a gentleman came into my office to tell me he had just witnessed his own milkman hand a street cleaner a drink of milk contained in the lid of his can and then replace the lid.

"I have witnessed over and over again milk men collect bottles from their customers, poke the index finger in the mouth of one and the thumb in the other to carry the bottles to his wagon. Trusting that they had been properly cleaned by the house wife, the bottles were at once refilled and caps taken out of a pocket which also contained a handkerchief and then these bottles of milk were delivered to the next customers. It is not worth while to enumerate other instances to make my point clear, that is, we must not connect ourselves to the dairy farm in looking for conditions that render milk impure. Our municipalities throughout the state will have to keep their eyes open to the way in which the dealers and others are handling the milk after it has left the farmer's care."

STATE RECOVERS MORE CANVAS

Nearly all of the Stolen Tents Have Been Traced and Found. Some of the Methods Used in Rounding up the Guilty Parties.

The State police are developing some interesting facts in the tent stealing investigation. It is reported that many more tents were recovered on Monday evening, but some few are holding out against the search of the police.

One party of campers who were nicely located along the banks running waters of a stream not far from town had an unpleasant surprise sprung on them. It is said that the camp looked very much like a fully equipped company of militia except that from the appearance of the canvas nearly all were ranking officers. The complete equipment consisted of about twelve pieces of canvas. After the raid by the State Police, approximately two unclaimed pieces of canvas remained. The discoveries made by the State authorities have not been disclosed through the efforts of the past few days. Plain clothes men have been working on the case ever since the campcoming ended.

One instance is told of a man who lurked in the vicinity of Dick's Dam while a Gettysburg party camped there. His object was to make an inspection of the canvas but the campers were not wise to this fact. When questioned concerning his visit he told some of the party that he was a life guard from Atlantic City on a little outing. This sounded well enough as the man was a good swimmer, seemed to have perfect knowledge of motor boats and was right at home in aquatic sports.

Other stories are told of police acting as farm employes. The authorities are withholding several warrants, expecting the guilty parties to return the canvas without prosecution.

ST. JAMES 5 BRETHREN 2

In Game Monday St. James Team Climbs Nearer to the Top by Defeating the United Brethren Team.

Baseball speculation is not confined exclusively to the major leagues. Local fans are offered a very interesting bit of "dope" on the Sunday School League. During the summer a warm contest has been going on and at present the standing is very close.

On Monday evening the St. James team had no trouble in pulling off a victory against the United Brethren by a score of 5 to 2. The game won Monday evening gives St. James a chance at first place. Today will be the deciding game. St. James will meet the Methodists. Now St. James has won just one game less than the Catholics. If the Jamies should slide one over on the Methodist this evening they will be tie for first place.

The game on Monday evening was not of the sensational kind. Neither team offered any exhibition of chasing the ball out of Nixon Field.

The batteries were Hartzel and Schriver for St. James, and S. Lighter and P. Oyler for the United Brethren. Both teams are credited with a number of well placed hits. One thing to be noticed was the absence of dissent over the umpire's decisions. On several occasions during the summer when the battle was in dispute, expressions were used by the rosters that would not sound well in a Sunday school. This expression of feeling should be eliminated.

The standing of the teams in the league follows:

	Won	Lost	P. C.
Catholic	9	2	.818
St. James	8	2	.800
Methodist	4	4	.500
Reformed	5	6	.455
Presbyterian	3	7	.300
College	3	7	.300
United Brethren	0	4	.000

THE SICK

Mrs. Heindel who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis in the Baltimore Hospital is reported as getting along very nicely. Her condition has improved so rapidly that the physicians did not deem it necessary for Mr. Heindel to remain in Baltimore. He returned Monday evening after an absence of several days and has again taken up his duties.

Miss Louise Duncan, who was operated on for appendicitis in Baltimore last Wednesday is improving rapidly.

Recipe For a Flower Garden.

Take twenty square yards of sand and pebbles, stir in sufficient clay to make a compact water tight mass, ram down hard and score the surface with a rake. Add carefully ten packets of seeds of the most magnificent flower known that will grow anywhere and under any conditions, throwing up a continuous succession of enormous flower trusses from March to November, each petal five inches across and of the richest and most glowing tints. This is the commonest of all flowers and will be found listed on any page of any florist's catalogue. Set the whole out to rise, keeping it moist and warm. After allowing the mass to rise four months sprinkle red spiders and green aphides plentifully over the top and soak well with tears. The net result may be preserved in a small bottle of alcohol for future reference.—Philadelphia North American.

JOHN CROMER AGAIN IN JAIL

Accused of Stealing Personal Apparel, Produce, Chickens, and believed to be implicate in Horse Stealing.

John Henry Cromer, who attained local notoriety several years ago for stealing horses, has returned to the county and is again in the clutches of the law. After serving a term of four years in the penitentiary on a charge of grand larceny, Cromer sought other haunts for brief reflection. His sojourn out of the county was not of long duration, owing to his desire to encourage home industry and his failure to become acclimated in other localities. He explains his absence as being unavoidably detained and when asked about his imprisonment said he could serve a sentence of four years standing on his head.

Mr. Hesson appeared at the jail on Monday to identify some of the stolen articles which he had suspected Cromer of taking. He recovered a razor and immediately recognized a pair of new suspenders worn by Cromer. He was not in his cell very long until he sprung a new trick on the sheriff. Having noted his nabilitation when he entered, the sheriff returned in a short time to make a close examination, and he was surprised to find the fellow clad in a different pair of trousers. The trousers he had wore on entering were of a neat pattern and had the appearance of expensive goods. It was learned that the trousers were stolen and the fellow evidently disposed of them in some way, but where he has concealed them is a puzzle. The cell has been searched very carefully and the hunt seems to have disclosed a cele brated disappearing act known only to the man himself. Many people blame Cromer for stealing numerous articles within the past few weeks. He stole a basket of eggs and tried to dispose of them in Hampton, when the contents of the basket were removed, the name of Abraham Albers appeared in the bottom. Mr. Hesson believes he is the person who recently stole twenty eight of his chickens.

HEARTS ADRIFT

"Truth is stranger than fiction" they say. A singular coincidence is cited in this respect in connection with "Hearts Adrift" the popular drama. When Langdon McCormick wrote this play he put into it an incident that has since been enacted in real life. In the second act a prison is shown where the there is confined awaiting the execution of a sentence of death. The officer guarding him is a man with a soul concealed beneath his brass buttons and does not hesitate to console the prisoner. During the conversation it transpires that these two men were comrades in arms during the civil war, and that at the Battle of Gettysburg the prisoner saved the officer's life in a daring manner amid shot and shell. As soon as he learns this, the officer throws open the prison doors and bids the prisoner go, then covers his retreat, holding the guards back at the point of a pistol. "Hearts Adrift" in which this dramatic scene of undying friendship is portrayed will be the attraction at the Walter Theatre Wednesday, September 14.

Russia.

Russia did not break into European history until comparatively recent times. Ruric, a Varangian chief, seems to have been the first to establish a government, about 862. Ruric's descend ants ruled about many ups and downs till 1508, at which time the real history of the country may be said to begin. With the solitary exception of the United States of America, the progress of Russia under Peter the Great and Catherine II is unequalled for rapidity in the history of the world.

COLORFUL FOLKS HERE IN FORCE

Annual Emancipation Day Excursion Brings Large Number of Baltimore's Colored Population to Visit the Battlefield.

September 13 is not Emancipation day nor is September 22. The notice issued by President Lincoln on the 22nd of September, 1862, was preparatory to the emancipating of all slaves held in rebellious states. The emancipation, however, did not go into effect until January 1, 1863, September being merely the date of preliminary announcement.

This trifling matter of date could certainly have no bearing on the intent of Baltimore colored people to celebrate their annual outing.

They arrived here in five sections numbering all told 3516. This is only a small part of Baltimore's innumerable colored population. Whether or not excursionists of this type are a benefit to the town has long been an arguement question by town people, especially merchants. The elimination of such excursions can only come about through the action of our people with the Railroad company. Action was taken several years ago, but a lively protest was entered and still they come.

The only evidence of a reception extended in any form is round the bar rooms and among some of the hackmen. Not like other excursionists are they able to lead immense banners and displays of welcome.

SETTLE CLAIM FOR HORSE

"On September 8 we received from you at our laboratory a portion of a horse's head containing the animal's brain and beg to advise you that negro bodies were found in sinuaries of the brain tissue examined and the diagnosis of rabies made.

In view of the diagnosis and in view of the fact that the animal was a horse and not apt to spread infection we will ask you to give us what information you possess relative to this case upon the enclosed blank."

S. H. Gilliland, State Veterinarian.

This case will be taken up by the board and an effort made to determine how the case originated. The horse was bitten by a dog during the early part of August. Dr. Hudson will be very grateful to learn anything about the dog or any dog known to have had rabies and which was running at large through any part of the county.

The county authorities were not long in taking up and disposing of this matter. On Thursday, September 8, the horse was ordered killed and the Commissioners having apprised the animal at $175, paid the claim on September 12.

PASSED THE MILLION MARK

On Sunday, August 28, the New York World printed its one-millionth advertisement for 1916. To be exact, the New York World printed 1,004,514 advertisements between January 1, 1910, and August 28, 1916. In the slang of the day, this was "going some," and "that ain't all." It's going to print over half a million more between now and next January. There is no such recommendation of a newspaper as the supremacy of its advertising records.

THE IMPORTANCE OF SIZE IN HOGS.

In an address before the Kentucky farmers' institute Professor J. D. Deitch had the following to say in regard to the size of hogs:

I think I am quite safe in saying that early maturity and quality have been overemphasized during the past years during all the time that hogs have been bred. People want a hog that will mature early. I want a hog that will grow big. When the market demands a hog that weighs 225 to 275 pounds, why do we want a brood sow that weighs 900 pounds? It is just this—size and thriftiness become their characteristics and are transmitted. A pig that is from an 800 pound sire and dam will grow larger than from a 400 pound sire and dam, and the larger the parent stock the sooner you will be able to get your pig to the market weight and the less feed it will require to do that. Therefore, if you can feed a pig that comes from a 400 pound sire and dam to weigh 300 in ten months' time, you ought to be able to feed a pig to weigh 300 pounds, from an 800 pound sire and dam, in seven or eight months' time and use less feed, because as a hog approaches maturity he grows slower, and it takes less for him to eat. The older a hog is the less it requires for him to eat.

HAMPSHIRE BOY, PRIZE WINNER IN ENGLAND.

Therefore the older a pig the less he has to make gains. You perceive the point at once—the larger, then, the sire and dam the earlier will be the time your pigs will reach a marketable age. Then one point that people have been overlooking in hogs—they have been selecting for early maturity. Early maturity, of course, means small size. They have got a hog that they call of very high quality. Quality is very much a matter of condition. Where they have been selecting for quality, usually they have been selecting for fattening tendency. A fattening hog is one that matures early and gets ripe at an early age. So that we have this condition of affairs—that many times the improved hog is not as good as one that is not so highly improved. So the hog that is being developed for breeding purposes should never be allowed to get into that degree of finish where we require market hogs to get, and the amount of weight and ration should not be reduced to so small a quantity.

A record price was registered the other day for orange land in the vicinity of Lindsay, Cal., when eight and a quarter acres of bearing Valencia sold for $38,000, or at the rate of $4,000 per acre. Apple land in the most favored western fruit districts has passed hands at high prices, but they do not equal this.

Weighing the milk and use of the Babcock tester will tell accurately whether a given cow is worthy a place in the profitable dairy herd, but no plan has as yet been adopted to determine whether a given man is qualified to run a dairy. If the truth could be known quite likely as many fizzes with cows are due to the man as to the bovines.

EIGHT DOLLAR LOSS PER COW.

The Wisconsin Dairymen's association recently had a census taken of twenty-five herds of common dairy cows in a certain section of the state, and the data collected by the census taker (in some instances he might well have officiated in the capacity of cow undertaker) are illuminating to quite a degree, so much so that they will hold in any section of the country where dairying is followed. Of the twenty-five herds there was a variation in returns running all the way from $35 profit per head to a loss of $8.03 per head, not counting the value of the fertilizer or the calf, and it is likely that calves from such cows wouldn't amount to much for any purpose. One man who milked eighteen cows through the year realized the magnificent sum of 70 cents a head net for his labor; another who milked eighteen head was out of pocket 30 cents a head as a result of his dairy operations (he had developed good forearm muscles, however), while a third who milked twelve cows through the year lost $5.84 on each animal kept. The cows of the dairymen who netted $35 per head were grade Jerseys and Guernseys, while those who lost money in their operations or made but little were scrubs or grades of a beef rather than a dairy breed. In a majority of cases scrub sires of unknown or beef parentage were used, and little or no effort was made to improve the milking capacity of the herd, as the results above noted clearly indicate. But five silos were used in these twenty-five cases, and with these the results were vitiated because the silage was fed to cows of no pronounced milk capacity. The pointers to be got from a census of this kind are plain for any man who has the primal sense to comprehend simple facts—first, for success in the dairy business cows of a pronounced dairy type should be kept and pure bred sires of known ancestry used; second, a record should be kept of each animal in the herd so that the owner may know just what return she is giving; third, silos should be installed to get the most value out of the corn crop, and, lastly, as large a percent as possible of the protein required in the ration should be furnished by home grown clover, alfalfa or other legumes. Other things should be kept in mind in the dairy business, but the following of the four suggestions given would revolutionize the dairy business.

ALBERT J. BEVERIDGE.

Roosevelt Will Stump For Him
In Indiana.

T.R. WILL "CUT LOOSE" IN INDIANAPOLIS

Will Be His First Real Campaign Speech.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 13.—Senator Beveridge says that Theodore Roosevelt will make his first real campaign speech of this year in this city on the occasion of his visit here on Oct. 13.

The senator had a long conference with Roosevelt at Chicago a few days ago and says that the former president assured him he will "cut loose" in Indianapolis. The speeches he has been making, he said, are only preliminary to his real campaign opening.

While nothing has been given out by the Republican state committee in regard to the arrangements, it is known that several towns have made applications to have Roosevelt stop on his way to Indiana and make speeches from the rear platform of his car. Whether this plan will be followed is not known, but it is understood that something of the kind will be done.

JURY OBEYS JUDGE LANDIS

Court Took Attitude That Constant Reports of Existence of Beef Trust Merits a Thorough Inquiry.

Chicago, Sept. 13.—J. Ogden Armour, Louis F. Swift, Edward Morris and Edward Tilden, the big four in the Chicago beef trust, were indicted by a federal grand jury, charged with being in a combination in restraint of trade, in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

In addition named in the true bills were Arthur Meeker, of Armour & Co.; Charles Swift and several other men, ten in all, of lesser night in the beef combination. The corporations named in the recent true bill which was found faulty by Judge Landis weren't named. The grand jury had followed out the instructions of Judge Landis and indicted the men instead of the corporations.

J. Ogden Armour, president of Armour & Co. and director of the National Packing company, declared to be the clearing house for the trust.

Under section 2 of the Sherman anti-trust law those convicted under this indictment may be sent to prison for one year, fined $50,000, or both, in the discretion of the court.

The voting of the indictments is a distinct victory for Judge Landis. He, according to men close to him, took the attitude that the constant reports of the existence of a beef trust were persistent enough to merit a thorough inquiry. All the court desires, these men declare, is that the matter have, once for all, a thorough investigation by a grand jury not subject to suggestions by an opposing element, and if indictments were found, to have a jury of twelve men pass on the evidence and either find that there is or there is not a beef trust.

TRYING TO SETTLE STRIKE

Mayor of Columbus, O., Advocates Compulsory Arbitration.

Columbus, O., Sept. 13.—Following advice given by Colonel Roosevelt in his speech Saturday, in which he advocated arbitration of the street car strike, Mayor Marshall sent a letter to Governor Harmon, requesting that a special session of the Ohio assembly be called to provide for legal compulsory arbitration and to prevent corporations from issuing watered stock. His letter reads:

"I respectfully request that the general assembly of Ohio be called into special session to enact laws relating to public service corporations.

"1.—Providing for compulsory arbitration and protection of the public in the event of strikes and lockouts.

"2.—Defining distinctly the relation between such corporations and their employees and the obligations of one to the other.

"3.—Preventing over-capitalization.

"If the Columbus Railway and Light company had no obligation except that relating to the true value in money of the property it operated, had it not been obliged to pay dividends on watered stock, no doubt a reasonable increase of wages would have been made on demand of employees."

Killed by Robbers.

WINNING A WIDOW

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.

In and around what is called the Beecher settlement, which was a settlement of farmers, there were three widowers and seven young men who were looking for wives. At the same time there was a scarcity of marriageable girls, and the only widow for five miles around was the Widow Harkins, who had lately bought a farm and moved into the community.

The Widow Harkins was thirty-five. She was good looking and smart. She had a captivating way, and she had only got settled down when the widowers and the young men began to prick up their ears. It was common sense to figure that the widow would marry again if the right man came along.

One of the first Beechers to call was Lyman. He was one of the widowers. For two years he had had his eye out for a widow with a well stocked farm. He was received in a very friendly spirit. The widow looked neat and trim, and she smiled and laughed and chatted in a way that made his heart go tunking. She referred to her lonely situation and then referred to the fact that her hired man was behind with his work. There was plowing to be done, but she was afraid he would not get to it until too late for corn planting.

Lyman Beecher had never done anything for anybody without pay, but on this occasion, much to his surprise, he found himself volunteering to do some plowing as a neighborly act. He brought over his teams and prepared ten acres for corn. He worked so hard and the widow was so thankful that he was encouraged to state his case. He had a farm, four children, eleven hogs, five cows, forty sheep and several other things, and he would offer his heart and hand to the woman before him. He wasn't thrown over the fence, but was told that he must wait a year for his answer. He didn't like it at all, but the plowing had been done, and he had to grin and bear it.

Next came Goodheart Beecher, widow and cousin of Lyman. He greased his boots and made an evening call. A gallon of hard cider and a pan of fried cakes were placed before him, and the widow got his heart fluttering. There were times when she was, oh, so sad and lonely, and this was one of the times. That cornfield was ready for planting, but she was afraid the hired man could not get around to it. Goodheart Beecher had work enough on his own farm, but there was a sad mouthed little widow looking him straight in the eyes, and he almost begged that she would permit him to plant that field. She finally consented. She also consented that he should buy the seed out of his own pocket. When the work was finished he went up to the house and asked the woman to be his, and she put him off as she had the other. His back ached as he walked home, but what could he do about it?

The third man was Moses Beecher. In the same way she induced him to plant five acres of potatoes for her. Then he proposed and was put off for a year.

The young men had been considerably waiting for the widowers to try their luck, and now it was their turn. Young Christian Beecher came forward. He was twenty-three years old, weeded her corn for her, proposed and waited a year.

The fifth was young John Beecher. He was called John the Baptist Beecher. He calmly suggested that she hire a man who could hustle. He called again and again, but he did no work. He advocated kicking the hired man, but did not offer to exert himself.

Things were thus, and the widow was looking around for No. 6, when one day she started for the crossroads store, a mile away. She cut across lots to shorten the distance, and an old bull took after her and drove her up a ladder leaning against a haystack. He hooked the ladder down, but she had gained the crest of the stack. She was roosting there, and the bull was galloping about and making the dirt fly, when John the Baptist Beecher came along in his buggy. The stack was within talking distance of the road, and the young man halted to ask what was the matter, although the question was superfluous. Of course the widow wanted the bull driven away and to come down.

"Look here, widow," replied the young man as he got out of his buggy and found a comfortable seat on the fence, "I am head over heels in love with you."

"Yes, but shoo the bull away."

"And I'll make you a good husband."

"Yes, but I want to get down."

"And I'll run that farm bang up. I wouldn't hoe the taters, but I believe you love me a bit."

"Oh, John, John!"

"And now you are either going to marry me or be left right up there. I see Squar Beecher coming in his buggy, and he's got one of his girls with him. Will you marry me or stay up there?"

"Must—must I, John?" asked the widow in a trembling voice.

"Can't get out of it. I'm not taking any chances, though. You don't come down until you are my wife."

When the squire came up the situation was explained, and with John the Baptist on the fence and the widow on the haystack they were made one and inseparable, and the bull was driven away, and the honeymoon began, and the taters were taken care of.

And the interest is likely to be large in the competition, as the first premium is $150.

DEMOCRATS SWEEP MAINE

MAY CONTROL LEGISLATURE

Republican Forces Were Completely Overwhelmed and Democrat May Succeed Eugene Hale in United States Senate.

Bangor, Me., Sept. 13.—The predicted Democratic landslide struck Maine, with the result that Frederick W. Plaisted, Democrat, of Augusta, is elected governor over Bert M. Fernald, the Republican incumbent, by a plurality of at least 5000, while William M. Pennell, Democrat, is elected to congress in the First district over Asher C. Hinds, and D. J. McGillicuddy, Democrat, has defeated John P. Swazey, Republican, in the Second district.

Chairman Boyd, of the Republican state committee, admits that the election of Representative Edwin C. Burleigh in the Third district is in doubt, with at least an even chance of the election of Samuel W. Gould, of Skowhegan, Democrat. Representative Frank E. Guernsey, of Dover, in the Fourth district, is probably safe, although hard pressed by George M. Hanson, Democrat, of Calais.

Plaisted has carried nearly all of the cities and large towns, while even in the country districts the Democrats have made great gains, and Plaisted's plurality may be 10,000.

The re-election of Representative Frank E. Guernsey to congress is in doubt, and reports from Piscataquis, Aroostook and Washington counties indicate the election of George M. Hanson, Democrat, by about 1000 plurality.

F. Marion Simpson, of the Republican state committee, now admits the legislature to be in doubt and as returns come in from the back towns it becomes evident that the landslide has completely overwhelmed the Republicans and that both house and senate will be Democratic. This is the most important and significant feature of the election, as it insures the election of a Democrat to succeed Eugene Hale in the United States senate—something entirely unexpected by either party, and an unlooked for result for the factional fight in the Republican party that forced the retirement of Hale. For the first time since its organization the Republican party has been routed completely in Maine.

The result is a surprise not to say a shock to the Republican leaders who supported the Fernald administration, but causes much rejoicing among those Republicans who revolted against Fernald and what is known as "the Ricker crowd." Springing the rich Rickers, of Poland Springs, who two years ago put Fernald forward for governor and who have since been engaged in building up an organization to combat "the old guard" and send Judge Frederick Powers to the United States senate in place of Eugene Hale. This rebellious faction of the party contributed much to the triumph of the Democracy, while for the rest it is attributed to general disgust at political abuses under prohibition and extravagance in state expenditures during Fernald's administration.

WILD DASH DOWN MOUNTAIN IN AUTO

Wilkes-Barre Man and Daughter Had Narrow Escape.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Sept. 13.—William M. Stockbridge and his ten-year-old daughter Betty had a miraculous escape from death in a wild dash down the Wilkes-Barre mountain in an automobile.

They had reached the top, when the transmission gear broke, and in order to get back into the city to have the break repaired, Stockbridge started to coast the machine down the Ashley boulevard, a magnificent road, upon which the grade is deceptive.

Stockbridge soon found, however, that the brakes didn't hold and the machine dashed on from twenty to thirty, to forty and finally to fifty miles an hour. At this great speed Stockbridge was unable to make the turns and the strain of the wheels was so terrific that they collapsed.

Stockbridge and his daughter were thrown out and slid along the road, while the machine jumped over them, went down an embankment and was dashed to pieces. They were brought here for medical treatment. They are covered with cuts and bruises, but no bones are broken.

A lot of farmers will fill silos this fall for the first time. A good many more will have to have a year or two more of slovenly and wasteful handling of the corn crop to persuade them of the value of this best of all aids to successful stock raising and dairy management.

CHANLER STILL LOVES CAVALIERI

MONEY AFFAIRS A SECRET

Husband's Lawyer Admits Anti-Nuptial Settlement Was Made on Singer, But Declines to State the Amount.

New York, Sept. 13.—Sheriff "Bob" Chanler, whose matrimonial adventures have been attracting general attention for the past week, still is in hiding, and no statement is forthcoming from him concerning the story of the stripping of his income from him by his wife, Lina Cavallieri, the opera prima donna, whom he recently left in Paris to return to his home here.

The first admission from an authoritative source that there had been any financial differences between Chanler and Mme. Cavallieri was made by Sidney Harris, Mr. Chanler's counsel, when he was asked if there had been an ante-nuptial agreement between Mr. Chanler and Mme. Cavallieri.

"There was," replied the attorney, "but I will not say how much money was involved in the agreement. That is a matter that may come out later, but we are hoping that this unpleasant matter may be settled without any litigation."

Mr. Harris said that while he expected to see some members of Mr. Chanler's family about the matter, there would be no "family conference," as was reported.

Still Loves Her.

"Mr. Chanler still loves Mme. Cavallieri," that is, he still thinks he loves her," said the lawyer. "Aside from this financial difference, they are on good terms."

It is said he assigned his income of $30,000 a year to her, and she allows him $20 a month.

Members of his family who have kept in touch with him are trying to find a remedy for the situation in which the mad infatuation of the former millionaire for the opera singer has placed him. From these conferences there were little out of rumor. One story was that the family and six trustees of the property of the amateur politician and artist had decided definitely not to honor the agreement made by the love-maddened "Sheriff Bob."

All the securities and real estate holdings of the family are in this country, and should the Chanlers refuse to pay the $30,000 a year income left to the sheriff, Cavallieri would have to sue in this country to compel the carrying out of the agreement.

May Plead Insanity.

It was strongly rumored that the family and trustees had decided to wait until the diva should attempt such action before honoring "Bob's" undertaking. In fact, it is asserted that the family even had decided upon a defense in case the singer should sue, and this defense would be emotional insanity.

The family would contend, the rumor ran, that the former sheriff had been "swept off his feet" by his love for the opera singer. At just the right moment, Cavallieri, who had dealt with great profit to herself, with infatuated men since the days in Rome when a son of a former premier of Italy offered her his "protection," put her arms about Chanler's neck and coaxed. In a moment of emotional insanity akin to Harry Thaw's "brainstorm," the Anglo-Saxon succumbed to the Latin. Such is the defense as outlined in certain quarters.

William Astor Chanler and former Lieutenant Governor Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler, it is said, will help their brother in his present financial straits. So will his sisters, Mrs. John J. Chapman and Mrs. Richard Aldrich.

The California had sixteen passengers on board.

Woman's Body Found in Woods.

A Child Wife

By EMILY B. PARKHURST

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

The daughters of all good families in India must be married. It would be a public disgrace as well as a crime against the Hindoo religion for an Indian family of good rank to keep a daughter unmarried. Since it is difficult for their parents to find husbands for them the daughters are made away with. Those of high birth, called rajpoots, are put to death by men especially employed to do so. The British government having passed laws against these murders, the parents of those girls who have not found husbands have resorted to a method of marrying them in name, though not in fact. There are a number of Brahmins, old and decrepit, called Kullian Brahmins, who go about with the object of hiring themselves out to go through the ceremony of the "seven steps" with young girls upon being paid for doing so. After marriage they leave the country and never see their young wives again.

In Allahabad there lived one of these rajpoot men who had a daughter over twelve years old.

In the next house lived another family, in which there was one son, aged eighteen. The two children had been brought up together, and their childish friendship had grown into love. The parents of the youth were very proud of him and destined him to marry some girl who should be not only of high caste, but whose parents would be able to bestow on her great wealth.

One evening after it was dark he was walking in the compound (garden) about his father's house when he heard a low call from the compound of the next house. Going to the fence, he descried the crouching figure of his sweetheart, evidently suffering from some great misfortune.

"What is it, dear girl?" he said, springing over the fence and taking her in his arms.

"I am to die."

"To die?"

"Yes. Today a man—a horrible looking man—came to the house and talked with my father. I had been told to go on an errand, doubtless that I should be away at the time and not hear what passed between my father and this man. But I had not yet gone. I have been suspecting that, not being married, I would soon be made away with in some fashion, though father and mother have tried to keep the awful knowledge from me. So when I saw this frightful creature come to the house I concealed myself behind a bamboo screen and heard every word."

She gave way to her feeling and was unable to proceed. Her lover kissed her again and again, begging her to tell him all.

"My father bargained with the man for a hundred rupees to strangle me."

"When—where?"

"Tomorrow night father is to take me out for a walk by the river, when this man is to come upon us suddenly as if to rob, seize me and after he has killed me throw my body into the river."

The agony of the youth was equal to that of the girl. Both knew that their separation and her death were not to be prevented. It would be of no avail for her to refuse to go to walk with her father or to try in any way to escape her fate. The young man dare not disobey the commands of his parents. Should he fly with the girl the sleuths of the Indian police would follow and surely capture them. They spent what time that remained for them together, not laying plans to prevent the calamity, but weeping in each other's arms. At last the girl heard her mother calling her, and after one clinging embrace she ran into the house.

The next afternoon an old man leaning heavily on his staff stopped at the house and asked for a bit of bread and a little wine. The girl, who was to die that night—knowing the secret, though her parents were not aware that she knew it—went to the cupboard by her father's order and brought the refreshment.

"Is your daughter married?" asked the visitor.

"No," replied her father. "We have no husband for her."

"But you cannot keep a girl like that longer. Our religion forbids."

"No," whispered the father; "we shall not keep her longer."

The look that accompanied the words was not lost on the old man.

"How much will you give me to marry her?"

"You are a Kullian?"

"I am."

"I will gladly give you your price if it be not too much."

"What say you to a hundred rupees?"

"I will give it gladly."

The girl was listening, and hope sprang up in her heart. She loitered near till she saw her father count out the money to the old man and then swooned.

When she came to herself she was told that she was to be married to the visitor. Death, which had been so near, seemed worse to her than living in separation from her lover, and she gladly went with her father and the old man that the ceremony should be performed. After it was ended the husband went away, and it was understood that he was never to return.

From that day the young lover was missed. Long after his love received from him the means to take her to America. He and the old husband were one.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proved Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. ## WYETH'S SAGE AND SULPHUR HAIR REMEDY

Here's the Proof

For two or three years my hair had been falling out and getting quite thin, until the top of my head was entirely bald. About four months ago I commenced using Sage and Sulphur. The first bottle seemed to do some good and I kept using it regularly, until now I have used four bottles. The whole top of my head is now fairly covered with hair and it keeps coming in thicker. I shall keep on using it a while longer, as I notice a constant improvement.

A bearded traveler who was compelled to stay all night in a backwoods cabin says that soon after the frugal meal a tall, gaunt youth of eighteen and an equally sallow and gaunt girl of seventeen, both barefooted, took their hats from wooden pegs in the wall and prepared to go out, whereupon the mother, taking her pipe from between her teeth said reprovingly:

"Go 'long an wash your face, Levi—you and Looly, both! Hain't you 'shamed to go off to an evenin' party without washin' your feet?"

They obeyed, but as Levi took the washpan from a bench by the door he said with a grumble:

"I'd 'bout as soon stay home from a party as to have to fix up for it."

A MISMATED POET

A UNION PITIFUL, YET COMIC

The Couple Were Utterly Unsuited to One Another, and He Fled From Her During the Honeymoon—A Reunion That Failed to Reunite.

The incidents leading up to and those following the marriage of Edward Fitzgerald, translator of the "Omar Khayyam," were of a ludicrous and at the same time somewhat serious character. Mr. Francis Gribble gave the facts in the Fortnightly Review:

"The Lucy Barton story is very pitiful, but it is also rather comic. She was a Quaker's daughter, who had joined the Church of England as a means, one imagines, of climbing as a social ladder, and she was just the sort of person whom Fitzgerald would scorn, but detest—pious, pious, methodical, fussy, not quite a lady and yet in a weird provincial way worldly, the sort of person to whom it seems equally important to teach in the Sunday school and to be a leader of society.

"Fitzgerald and she had known each other for the greater part of their lives and were both nearly fifty years of age when marriage overtook them. He did not even know that she was engaged to her. But she told him that he was, and he was too polite to contradict her.

"Politeness only broke down when, after the ceremony, she assumed proprietorial airs and insisted that her husband should pay afternoon calls with her and dress for dinner. That was the last straw, though very likely it was also the first.

"Fitzgerald supposed apparently that in marrying Lucy Barton he had merely acquired a housekeeper who would know her place, who would confine her new dignity to her housekeeper's room, leaving him as free as of old to slip about in slippers, eat, unkept, unshaven, enveloped in a dressing gown until the evening, with books all over the floor, pipes all over the mantelpiece and tobacco ash all over his clothes.

"It would not have mattered, of course, if he had married for love and if his bride had been a woman of grace and charm. Such a one would have changed all that like a fairy wand. But Fitzgerald had only married to oblige, and Mrs. Fitzgerald was not in the least like a fairy. She was more like a female drill sergeant, conventional, stiff and starched yet with pretensions.

"Her flow of fussy small talk was a nuisance, and her interruption of Fitzgerald's meditations with the demand that he should shave and wear clean linen assumed the proportion of a tragedy in his eyes.

"He stood it for a fortnight and then fled, leaving the honeymoon unfinished, going off to stay with friends, leaving a rabbit for his borrow.

"There were a reunion and an attempt at reconciliation, but in vain. Fitzgerald's letters to his friends at this period are like the letters home of a boy who is being bullied at school.

"I believe," he writes to Professor Cowell, "there are new channels fretted in my cheeks with many unmanly tears, and there really is no evidence that he had anything to cry about beyond the fact that he was being hustled out of a comfortable dressing gown into a starched shirt with high collars.

"That fact was symbolical of the general discrepancy of tastes and points of view. So we find him writing again, 'Till I see better how we get on I dare fix on no place to live or dine,' and then before long came definite separation and the drafting of a deed of settlement.

"Fitzgerald, it is said, used long after to walk up and down a certain garden path for hours together calling himself a fool, and when in later years he met his wife again he first put out his hand and then changed his mind and turned his back."

The Scales on the Hair

If you look at a human hair under the microscope you will find that its surface is formed of successive overlapping scales. The bristles of the hog bear much resemblance to the human hair, though their diameter is greater and the thick scales are much finer. Sheep's hair has much coarser scales. It is owing to the existence of these scales that one is able by a peculiar process to tell which is the tip and which the other end of a hair rolling it between his finger and thumb. Thus manipulated the hair always travels in the direction of the base because the edges of the scales prevent it from going the other way.

A Masquerade

A Story of the Eighteenth Century.

By EDITH B. GOLDWIN

"For shame! You, the son of an earl and a member of one of the proudest families in England, to make a highwayman of yourself. Our betrothal is at an end. Leave me."

The Hon. Alfred Tiltotson, younger son of the Earl of Enderby, withdrew without offering a bit of defense, keeping his face while retreating toward the Lady Clara Travis, the plume of his hat trailing on the floor. But, though his bearing was humble, he was not without hope. Did he not know by her heightened color, the tremor in her voice, even a slight moisture in her eye, what she suffered in dismissing him? But would her heart triumph over her resolutions? Clara Travis was not a prude.

She was a light hearted girl who could dance till morning at a ball, ride across country, taking fences and ditches by the way, but she would never stoop to injure even an enemy. Indeed, men said of her that her standard of honor was that of an honorable man.

Months passed, and Tiltotson saw no alteration in Lady Clara's treatment of him. He looked in vain for the slightest sign of relenting. But if she grieved she did not believe in seclusion. She hunted, danced, played at cards with no trifling stake, just as she had done before her disappointment. Tiltotson when he met her looked in vain for even recognition. She smiled or colored slightly at his approach, but evidently considered one who had taken purses even for amusement unworthy of her acquaintance. When months had passed and there was no reconciliation the lover became despondent.

During this period, the latter part of the eighteenth century, Venice set the fashion in all matters of amusement, just as under the second empire in France Paris set the fashions in woman's dress. From the City of the Sea a mania for masquerading and gambling spread over Europe. In London people were accustomed to go about to gambling and dancing houses, and matters finally came to such a pass that the city government decided to raid a notorious dance house in Soho. A few hours before the raid was made the lord mayor, dressed at a fashionable club, revealed the proposed descent to a companion. The latter begged to be permitted to accompany the force sent for the purpose disguised as a policeman, and leave was given. By the lord mayor's order he was enrolled and uniformed as a special policeman.

Reverly was in full swing at the dance house when a policeman, followed by others, entered the place, locked the door behind him and posted a man at each point of egress with orders to permit no one to pass out. Nearly all those present were masked. The dance came to a sudden halt, the dancers standing stock still in their places. Then the officer of police called:

"All unmask!"

Some endeavored to pass the policeman at the points of exit, but were driven back. Some endeavored to hide under the furniture or behind curtains, but they were pulled out. It was a slow process, but one by one they were all pushed on to the open floor and forced to uncover their faces.

What was the amazement of the police to discover that at least a third of the company consisted of ladies and gentlemen of the highest aristocracy. A policeman stepped up to a lady, furious at her exposure, her eyes snapping, her foot stamping the floor, and, doffing his hat respectfully, said to her:

"My service to your ladyship. I've come to ask which is worse, taking purses on the highway or frequenting low dance houses?"

The lady looked at him, stupefied for a moment, then exclaimed:

"Alfred Tiltotson, what does this mean?"

"That a highwayman has joined the police. You would not have me as a lawbreaker, so I became one of those whose business it is to punish lawbreakers."

"How dare you speak to me when I have persistently cut you?" she cried angrily.

"Clara, I can get you out of this."

"Oh, Alfred!"

"I knew you the moment I entered the room. You have not been recognized. Put on your mask and come with me."

Donning the mask and slipping her hand on his arm, the two walked out of the hall and, entering a carriage, were driven away.

"Who was your escort to this select party?" asked Tiltotson.

"Father. I forgot all about him."

"He won't suffer, being in good company. Nearly all our best families were represented. But, Clara, if one who attends dance houses is too good for a highwayman, don't you think she could condescend to marry a policeman?"

"There was no reply. He felt for her hand, found it, and it was not withdrawn.

The next morning all London rang with the news that the nobility had attended a dance house in Soho, and many names were mentioned as participants in the festivities. But the name of Lady Clara Travis was not among them. She never afterward forgot this service of her husband.

Stoppage of the Teat.

The proper manner in which to handle and treat stoppage of the teat is thoroughly to wash it in an antiseptic solution, then dip a teat plug into a healing ointment and insert it into the point of the teat, allowing same to remain from one milking to another. In this manner closure of the point of the teat can be overcome in a very simple and satisfactory way.

In the vast majority of cases the deleteriously unruly pupil comes from a home where the parents are neither respected nor exercise any wholesome authority. And quite often it is the parents of just such pupils who back them up rather than the teacher when they make trouble at school.

Wild grape vines, or the Virginia creepers, serve a practical and aesthetic purpose when their handsome green or autumn colors cover the naked uncouthness of outbuilding or dead tree, but they are quite out of place when they throttle live shade or fruit trees and deprive them of needed sunshine, moisture and plant food.

The hollow block is not only a cheaper building material than the common solid brick, but the air spaces which it contains mean a lighter and at the same time a warmer structure.
